

bulthaup history

Martin Bulthaup bought a sawmill in the Lower Bavarian town of Bodenkirchen in 1949. There he founded a furniture factory where the visionary concepts that were later to attract internationally renowned designers to bulthaup became established from the moment the company was founded.

At first, the kitchen sideboards were delivered locally on horse-drawn carts.

"Product and material authenticity" are concepts that define to this day what bulthaup products stand for: No compromises when it comes to quality, passion for painstaking attention to detail, and the best materials – expertly processed.

bulthaup

Martin Bulthaup began to make kitchen sideboards with exceptionally high-quality craftsmanship and materials in 1949.

Gerd Bulthaup brought to the firm his love of architecture, the Bauhaus philosophy and timeless design and began to expand the company to become the market leader for design-oriented kitchens.

In his book "Die Küche zum Kochen" (The Kitchen for Cooking) published in 1982, Otl Aicher describes a new kitchen philosophy, focusing on the significance of ergonomics for cooking.